THE GENERAL OF THE ARMY. faj. Gen. Schofield Submits His Annual Report to the Secretary of War.

TO AND THE EXPERIENCE GAINED IN THE CON-TEST POINTED OUT-MATTERS OF GENERAL INTEREST TO THE ARMY NOTED.

The annual report of Maj. Gen. John M. Schofield, commanding the army of the United States, to the Secretary of War draws attention especially to the useful lessons learned by the army last winter in the campaign against the Sioux in Dakota. He says:

The disturbance was formidable in fact and threatened to be far more formidable than any Indian war that had occurred in many years. The orders of the President were designed to suppress that trouble as promptly and effectively as possible, having mainly in view the protection of the extended settlements sur-rounding the Sioux reservation against detruction by hostile Indians. The execution of se orders involved the concentration of rly one-half the infantry and cavalry of the nearly one-half the infantry and cavalry of the army and some artillery upon the Sioux reservation, for which purpose it was necessary to bring troops from nearly all parts of the country west of the Mississippi river. These movements were necessarily attended with great expense, but happily the result fully justified the vigor of the measures adopted, which resulted in the suppression of the uprising without loss of life on the part of peaceful citizens, though the army suffered considerable loss and quite a large band of Indians was destroyed in conflict with the troops.

THE EXPERIENCE GAINED. The experience gained in the campaign of last om any uprising of the Indian tribes. If it were true, as was then so generally believed, that the Sioux Indians meditated a general up-rising, and their plans had been matured and one and their plans had been matured and cented with the secrecy and energy that tally characterize Indian movements, it uld have been entirely impossible, with the ops then located near the Sioux reservation. though constituting a very large fraction of the army, to have prevented great loss of life and ty in the surrounding settlements, while as also believed by many, the uprising was intended to embrace other warlike tribes in other parts of the country, the entire military force of the United States would have been wholly inadequate to prevent great dam-age to the settlements surrounding the reserva-Whatever may be the fact as to those plans they were, happily, so far anticipated that the Sioux Indians were sufrounded by an effective cordon of troops before they were ready for action, while the disaffection had me not spread so far among other tribes to become dangerous.

A careful consideration of all the circumces of this uprising among the Sioux seems ustify the opinion that no considerable ber of them had seriously intended to onnumber of them had seriously intended to engage in hostilities against the United States unless driven to such a course by unbearable hardship or in self-defense against the military operations ordered for their subjection. There is hence a well-grounded belief that, by the constant exercise of discretion in the management of the Indians, coupled with justice in all dealings of the government with them and the presence of a sufficient military force to overnawe the turbulent minority among them, there effective, and at the same time capable of most ready expansion whenever an increase is decided upon.

The conditions of modern tactics require the three-battalion organization for the infantry, as well as for the cavairy and artillery, each battalion to consist of not more than four companies, troops or batteries. In the artillery the company organization ought to be made to conform to that in the other arms of the serv-ice, namely, with one captain and two lieuten-ants, instead of three or four lieutenants, as under the present laws, and the necessities of the seacoast defense of the United States will speedily require some increase in the aggregate strength of the artillery. A careful estimate has shown that soven regiments, in lieu of the present five, will be required for this service, and that such a reorganization as will convert d that such a reorganization as will convert e present five regiments into seven can be made with very slight increase of expense, there being now in the five regiments almost the entire number of officers required to propofficer seven regiments.

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE. The important question of national defense, the report continues, which has been so thorw confidently regarded as settled by the egislative action of the last two Congresses. The wise policy thus inaugurated will, doubtces, be steadily pursued until the great seacoast harbors are placed in condition to resist coast harbors are placed in condition to resist any attack from a foreign enemy.

Satisfactory progress has been made in the construction of the gun factory at Watervliet, N. Y., in the manufacture of type gups of the highest qualities and in the manufacture of service mortars and their emplacement at the most exposed and important positions upon the sea coast, while contracts have been made for the material necessary for the construction. the material necessary for the construction large numbers of guns and mortars and for of large numbers of guns and motars and the the purchase of completed guns of the highest type. It will only require moderate annual appropriations for the next few years to place the extended sea coast of this country in such upon it any serious loss or damage. When this is accomplished the dignified and just policy which this country has adopted toward all foreign nations may be steadily adhered to without apprehension of results unfavorable either to the welfare or to the honor of this country.

INDIANS IN THE ARMY.

It is assumed, as a general principle of miliary policy, that all of the permanent inhabiturnish their fair proportion of the military forces of the country, and with this end in view, that all should have representation in the permanent establishment. It has also been demonstrated by experience, as well as by reason, that one of the most effective and most rapid methods of civilizing the savage tribes of a country and converting them from examinations.

The following military posts being no longer necessary have been abandoned since the last annual report: Forts Abraham Lincoln, North Dakota: Davis, Texas; Lowell, Arizona: Marcy, New Mexico; Shaw, Montana: Selden, New Mexico; Shaw, Montana: Selden, New Mexico; Shaw, Montana: Selden, New Mexico; Union, New Mexico, and Fort Lewis, Colorado. These added to the number practically abandoned during the last two years and previously reported amount to twenty-eight military posts. Fort Bidwell has been temporarily reoccupied by a small force. This serves largely to mark the advance which has been made in the settlement of the western eves largely to mark the advance which has seen made in the settlement of the western erritories and the subjugation of the roaming adians which formerly impeded that settlement. The garrisons of the several abandoned costs have been united to those of a more persanent character, giving larger garrisons and onsequent increased efficiency and economy a the administration. It is anticipated that a set additional frontier posts may be abandoned

PAY OF THE SOLDIER.

This disparity has been made still more apparent, in recent years, by the progress of general education and such improvements in the agt of war and the tactics of armies as have imposed much more important duties and responsibilities than formerly upon non-commissioned officers of the line. I respectfully recommend that the pay of these non-commissioned officers exclusion of undesirable characters from enexclusion of undesirable characters from en-listment have worked together to elevate the character and increase the contentment of the soldiers, without in any measure, it is believed, impairing their efficiency. The winter campaign against the Sioux developed the most cheerful endurance of the greatest hardships, as well as great gallantry in action and a total absence of desertions while in the field in the presence of the enemy.

DEFICIENT TRANSPORTATION. The readiness of the army for active field service in an emergency has long been greatly service in an emergency has long been greatly impaired by the reduction of means of transportation to that which is required for the ordinary post service, making it necessary to procure, by whatever means may be available, the transportation required for troops in the field. Though this condition is always to be regretted, it is a source of no little satisfaction that the quartermaster's department was able during the recent campaign to supply by contract, or otherwise, the requisite means of transportation without great or injurious delays in the movements of troops.

Gen. Schofield notes the increased efficiency of the medical department with great satisfaction,

Gen. Schofield notes the increased efficiency of the medical department with great satisfaction, and he pays a tribute to the zeal and diligence of the officers of the commissary and ordnance departments during the campaign of last win-ter. He approves of the remarks of Gen. How-ard and Gen. McCook on the necessity of forti-fying the harbors of Savannah and San Diego, and says: "The necessity of other and more prominent seaports are too well known to need special mention."

A PHILANTHROPIC WOMAN.

Lady Henry Somerset Talks Enraestly on the Evils of Intemperance. Lady Henry Somerset has addressed a great many audiences during the six years of her philanthropy, but she never stood before a more enthusiastic assemblage than that which occupied last night every available foot of Wanted-a Colored woman willing and the state of the capable to do general housewerk for the capable to do gener inter is valuable, as indicating the possible philanthropy, but she never stood before a more enthusiastic assemblage than that which space in Metropolitan M.E. Church. Not only was the auditorium crowded, but the big lecture room on the lower floor was also filled to its limit, an overflow meeting having been arbon articles with the property of the same dollars. The property of th church proper must fail to accommodate those who were anxious to see and hear a titled Bishop Hurst presided over the principal meeting and in his preliminary remarks spoke of the growing sentiment on the liquor ques-tion and the increased activity of the wearers of the white ribbon. When introducing Lady Somerset the bishop was applauded for saying that the great work she had done for God and humanity had gained for her a patent of no-bility which was far above earthly honors and titles.

There was nothing noisy in the welcome given the principal speaker, but the waving of a thousand white handkerchiefs was as expressive as any of more common forms of greeting. Lady Somerset was immediately in accord with her audience, for she stated that the number of them had seriously intended to engage in hostilities against the United States unless driven to such a course by unbearable hardship or in self-defense against the military operations ordered for their subjection. There is hence a well-grounded beinef that, by the constant exercise of discretion in the management of the Indians, coupled with justice in all dealings of the government with them and the presence of a sufficient military force to overawe the turbulent minority among them, there need be no serious apprehension of an extended uprising of the Sioux and probably not of any other Indian tribe.

It is also well worthy of the most serious consideration that by the addition of a few thousand men to the enlisted strength of the army, whereby a sufficient force might at all times be stationed in the vicinity of the great reservations, the danger of an uprising and resulting destruction of frontier settlements would be entirely removed and the great expense of transportation of troops from distant parts of the country entirely avoided.

Under the head of army reorganization Gen. Schofield says:

Whatever may be the judgment of Congress respecting the aggregate strength of the military force to be maintained in time of peace it cannot be doubted that the organization of that force should be such as to make it most effective, and at the same time capable of most ready expansion whenever an increase is decided upon.

Lady Somerset was immediately in accord with the cause of temperance in this country had progressed to a much greate extent than it had in England. Cleverly did the speaker sketch the history of the liquor traffic in Great Enrich, and with great warmth did sho whith the errormer. But a little while ago it was which have heretofore stood between the evil and the reformer. But a little while ago it was tribulation, it was true, but they had achieved wonderful things.

Lady Henry Somerset is one of the most active of those who support the mission conducted by the Rev. Hugh Price Hughes. She has great wealth and since 1885 has devoted herself and her means to the advancement of Christianity. Lady Somerset will leave this evening for New York and purposes going from thence to Chicago. She will not return to England until early in December.

furnish their fair proportion of the military forces of the country, and with this end in view, that all should have representation in the permanent establishment. It has also been demonstrated by experience, as well as by reason, that one of the most effective and most rapid methods of civilizing the savage tribes of a country and converting them from enemices into friends is to receive a reasonable proportion of them into the military service of the country. Although this policy has not yet progressed very far in its execution, the results have been entirely satisfactory, and it is recommended that it be adhered to until the American Indian constitutes a due proportion of the enlisted strength of the army.

In mentioning the means that must be used for the salvation of the intemperate Lady Somerest said that for many years a great deal of dependence had been placed on education and the Sunday school. This hope had, however, proven to be fallacious, for of about 10,000 people in England's jails more than 6,000 had been members of Sunday schools.

Reviewing the respective conditions of society in this country and in England Lady Somerset said she was rejoiced to know that there was no such drinking among the women here as there was in England. In London it had been estimated that the proportion of women to men who entered saloons and drank therein was three to four.

Some time was given to a sketch of Whitechapel and its horrors, and then mankind was instructed as to its duty toward the weaker sex.

At the conclusion of the address Mrs. Lafetra presented to Lady Somerseta magnificent basket of roses—the offering of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.
